About the Workshop

The course on Research Methodology in Social Sciences is designed to impart knowledge for scientific research to integrate qualitative and quantitative approaches in research and orient the young researchers to new advance techniques for precise, rational and scientific research. It also aims to train the scholars with advance statistical packages using in various fields and sub fields of social sciences. It is particularly meant for those who are engaged in survey research and have some basic knowledge of data processing, analysis and interpretation.

One of the purposes of the training programme is to help scholars with some of the basic features of computerized database management and the use of computers in data analysis and data interpretation.

The course would include a combination of theoretical lectures and practical experience on computers and some commonly available computer applications for both quantitative and qualitative analysis of data. The participants would be given some research project and the data generated would be used for application of various statistical concepts and techniques, from simple univariate to more complex multivariate techniques of data analysis.

Course Objectives and Methodology

The course will be operated through theoretical lectures and practical application of different research modules and statistical techniques. The participants would be provided some generated data and computers for application of discussed research methodology. Group participation, field survey as well as paper writing techniques would be also operated in this program.
